

Kingston, Ontario, January 19, 2023 – Do you live in the moment? If these were your best years, would you know it today or only realize it when looking in the rear-view mirror? Domino Theatre's angst is wrapped up in a whole lot of comedy, as it brings to its stage, Sir Alan Ayckbourn's 44th major stage work, Time of My Life..

A 54th family birthday party, in a small restaurant, is the setting for an, at times tragically funny, tale of the rise and fall in the fortunes of three couples, of three different ages and stages of relationship, moving through three different periods of time.

Ayckbourn juxtaposes past, present, and future to give the audience insight into things the members of this disastrously dysfunctional middle-class family might not yet have picked up on, and holds them out as moments.

"This show is so character-driven and this cast will draw you in and keep you looking for their next scene to find out what is the next chapter in their lives," affirms director Mae Whalen.

"It has truly been an honour working with the extremely talented actors and I appreciated their dedication to excellence," said Whalen, further adding: "The production crew are simply some of the best. Everything you see on stage is a result of someone's hard work behind it."

Time of My Life will be presented, Thursdays through Saturdays, from January 19th – February 7th at 7:30 p.m. (with the exception of Saturday, February 7th, which is a 2:00 p.m. matinée performance), in The Davies Foundation Auditorium at Domino Theatre, located at 52 Church Street in Kingston, Ontario.

They are available through The Grand Theatre box office by dialing 613.530.2050 or online via The Grand Theatre website, kingstongrand.ca.
